Ulrike Diebold is a professor of physics at the Vienna University of Technology. Her research interest is surface science, in particular the properties of single-crystalline metal oxides. The main tool of investigation is Scanning Tunneling Microscopy, and she enjoys fruitful collaboration with theoretical groups. She is a fellow of APS, AVS, and AAAS, and the recipient of the 2013 ACS Adamson Award and an Advanced Research Grant from the ERC.